

Twins

Personal identity is the basis of social identity formation which is gained by the person through distinction, while collective identity is gained through symmetry. In identical twins, this process is more complicated, and personal identity formation occurs after transition from symmetry to distinction. This process has been the concern of photographing for many times. At the first glance, photograph is in symmetry with the world and understanding its true nature is happened through transition from object-to-object symmetry of the photo with the world, and being distinct with it.

Ellahe Abdollahabadi

